Population

Butte County has seen its population fall over the last decade, dropping 238 between 2009 and 2019. However, since 2016 the population has experienced small increases to 2,597 in 2019. Difficulty keeping young people after high school graduation has contributed to the stagnant population. Still, the county is committed to economic development and a long-range plan for stability. It is focusing on tourists traveling through to destinations like Craters of the Moon National Monument and Sun Valley. The Idaho National Laboratory is located about 12 miles from Arco, the county seat. The majority of the 7,000 or more employees located at the laboratory work in the county but live elsewhere and commute by mass transit, making it a challenge for the county to see much economic gain from the laboratory. Arco, the largest city in the county, had a 2019 population of 880.

Labor Force & Employment

With a smaller population and labor force, the unemployment rate in Butte County fluctuates. In 2007 the county's unemployment fell to 2.5 percent. As the recession took hold in 2008, however, the rate nearly doubled to 4.3 percent and continued to climb, peaking at 8.2 percent in 2012. Despite fluctuations, the county's unemployment rate has remained below the national average for most of the last decade. In 2019 the rate experienced a drop to 2.6 percent.

The majority of the county's jobs are in professional and business services, which are mostly located at the federal laboratory. Government is a stable employer that includes small offices of several federal agencies along with county and school workers. The incubation center in Arco and the Butte County Economic Development group continue to focus on and assist with business development and attraction. Tourism is also an important economic factor because of the Craters of the Moon National Monument.

In 2014 the U.S. Census Bureau announced that Butte County is officially part of the Idaho Falls metropolitan statistical area. This change is the result of a significant number of workers commuting to Butte for work at the national laboratory.

Nonfarm Payroll Jobs for 2019

Covered Employment

While Butte County benefits from one of the state's largest employers, the Idaho National Laboratory, most workers at the lab live outside the county. For this county it is important to remember that employment and wage numbers are calculated by where the jobs occur. As such, the high wages at the laboratory artificially elevate the average wage in the county due to the fact that only a small percentage of the county's residents actually work at the lab. While the county's average wage paid in 2018 was $92,354, per capita income was $38,961.
